

Summer of Longhorn Discontent

The University of Texas football team has taken a few lumps imagewise this summer, with more appearances on the police blotter than the Dallas Crackboys in their Michael Irvin heyday. We who don't bow down daily in the direction of Memorial Stadium thought these kinds of problems were impossible because Mack Brown listens to rap on his iPod, but apparently not.

Offense, allegedly

Mack Brown's reaction

Chances of playing for UT again

Robert Joseph,
safety

Two counts of breaking into cars in June, aggravated robbery in July

Suspended him in June; he was off the team by July

The Longhorn defensive backfield is weak, so...maybe a "life lesson" will be learned.

Henry Melton,
defensive end

DWI in June

"One thing we pride ourselves on in our program is our family atmosphere, and this will be handled within our family."

Is that the Lindsay Lohan family he's talking about? Melton definitely returns.

Sergio Kindle,
linebacker

DWI in July

"One thing we have really prided ourselves on in our program is our family atmosphere, and this will be handled within our family."

Good to see Mack keeps the DWI-response folder handy at all times. Kindle's a top recruit; he ain't going anywhere unless there's a dead body involved.

Andre Jones,
defensive tackle

Aggravated robbery in July

No immediate comment or action

He's a freshman, so no need to rush. Especially until you can find out whether he can play at this level.
